

New Greenland

By Ian Kang

Age 8

I want to turn all the deserts in the whole world into New Greenland.

The earth has many different sides. On one side, deserts cover about one-seventh of the earth's land surface. Humans can't use these desert areas. On another side of the earth, melting ice caps could spell disaster for coastal cities and villages. I wish I had a superpower to move the ice from both the South Pole and the North Pole to the deserts and create a New Greenland. I will build a million homes for the poor and the homeless. I will build a million schools for poor kids to study in. Further, I will make a new Disney World for all the kids to play in. Along with Disney World, I will build the biggest zoo in the world for kids to visit and enjoy.

I know that it is very hard to turn deserts into New Greenland, but I will study hard for my whole life, and I will work with other people who share my ambition. I believe that if we all work hard, the New Greenland will come true.