Once upon a time, there was a magic dog who could give out gold, but nobody knew about it. They all thought he was just a homeless dog.

There was a little girl in the town. Her parents were poor slaves. They worked very hard all year round, but still couldn't make their ends meet. On a crispy cold Christmas morning, the little girl saw the dog wandering on the street, looking for food. She picked him up, took him home and fed him delicious food. Her parents' mean master saw that and demanded the poor little girl to pay for the food. She sobbed sadly because she didn't have a single penny. To her greatest surprise, the dog led her to the back of the house and gave her ten pieces of gold. When the girl paid the master with the gold, he was so excited that he set the little girl and her parents free. After the family left the town with the dog, the master's gold turned into rocks!

The little girl and her parents moved to another state and lived happily ever after with their special dog.
