

What If I Could Fly

By Ethan Ding

Age 8

If I could fly, I would go wherever I want. I would fly to the moon, to Mars, and to other planets to find other good places for humans to live. I would teach other people to fly too, so they wouldn't need to drive a car, ride a shuttle, or take an airplane when they wanted to travel. That way there would be no car, bus, or airplane accidents; there would be no pollution from gasoline and no traffic jams. My parents would get home from work on time. The world would be wonderful.

If I could fly, I would fly to the outer space and explore the solar system to find another good environment where people could live. If I found one, I would transport lots of people to there. We would build new homes, schools, playgrounds and toy factories. We would plant flowers and trees everywhere to make our new planet very pretty. We would let all the animals live together, so kids could play with monkeys, tigers and lions everyday. The animals would not hurt each other because they would have enough to eat and would be happy.

If I could fly, I would build a school to teach other people how to fly. This school would be free. If everyone could fly, the cars, buses, and airplanes would disappear. Our sky would be blue, and our air would be fresh. There would be no traffic jams, no noise and no transportation accidents. Everyone would fly wherever they wanted to go. Life will be enjoyable, and the world would be peaceful and wonderful.
